RICHMOND'S MYSTERY.

A Beautiful Young Widow Suddenly Disappears -- Foul Play Suspected.

RICHMOND VA. September 7 .- The tragic and mysterious death of pretty Jennie Cramer has found a counterpart in Virginia, The victim in this case is a beautiful young widow whose charms have often been the theme of praise in the County in absence did not create more than from a relative here was eturned unopened. This created uneasiness and a telegram was sent to West .Why, I don't know,' said the old Point, near which place she lived, asking her whereabouts. The answer came by wire: "Mis. Harvey is suppossed to have gone to Kentucky to look after some property left by her late husband, but nothing definite is known of her. She certainly went from here to Richmond on the train." Her relatives in Richmond were positive that she had not come to this city, and therefore went to West Point to investigate the matter. They learned that the widow had indicated her purpose to visit her daughter and soon returned to the sitting room. store. When she left she had $500 About half past pine o'clock Mrs. with which to pay some bills in the that he left her about a half mile from remainder of the distance. From Point is about twelve miles. She was seen and recognized by a blacksmith at Burtonsville, a small village on the road, and at the time she was in the buggy with Mr. Slater. She said she had to cross the Mattaponi river before she reached West Point, but the negro ferrymen have been unable to give any explanation as to her whereabouts. Rumors of a lady deeply veiled leaving West Point on' a steamer for New York have been exploded, and the conductors on the the train to Richmond say Mrs. Harvey did not get on there. Other persons have been seen who her description at the West Point Hotel, but here again the link has been lost. It is understood that the detectives will arrest a party to-morrow who, it is thought, will throw some light upon the mystery. Sara Bernhardt is about to start a theatrical newspaper in Paris, to which she is to be a leading contributor.
